September Home Care Series:

What Every Home Care Clinician Needs to Know About

Dementia, Depression and Delirium

4 Part Webinar Series – Thursdays, September 2018
10:30 am – 12:00 p.m., CST- Webinar Recordings Available

Cognitive impairments, depression and behavioral issues have a major impact on a patient's ability to recover from illness. This 4-part series will help home care staff better understand how to assess patients with behavioral health conditions, establish appropriate care plans, document properly and fulfill the requirements of the IMPACT Act as it applies to neuro-emotional items in OASIS -D.

Webinar 1, September 6, 2018

Depression and Anxiety Disorders - What We Know and Keys to Managing the Patient at Home

The CDC long-term study found that 37.9% of Home Health agency claims include a diagnosis of depression. Anxiety is known to co-exist at rates of up to 50% in people who have depression. Both these diagnoses coexist with numerous co-morbidities and are often the common factor related to hospital readmissions. Learn strategies to manage patients with these disorders at home.

Objectives:

- Define the occurrence of depression and anxiety in the elderly.
- Define depression and anxiety diagnoses.
- Explain the co-occurrence of depression and anxiety with the leading medical co-morbidities.
- Assess depression & anxiety in the homebound elderly.
- Define behaviors that decrease depression and anxiety.
- Establish patient goals for an episode.
